

Hello, my name is Herlitz. I am one of these things that you would never pay any attention to. However, everyone needs me (except you have this little nasty thing which is called Notebook). I am an exercise book. Not only an exercise book, but the exercise book of Babs. She has a Notebook, but does not use it very often which I am glad about! She only uses the Notebook for Email contact and term papers (I am sure she would use me instead of it if she didn't have to use it at university). But I am reserved for taking notes and that is very often! I don't know how much term papers I have prepared... I must say Babs loves writing and I am used whenever there have notes to be taken. Although I am happy that she uses me often, I have to admit that it is too often. Does she ever really use this notes? For term papers she takes too much notes in my opinion! The half of me is thrown away after using. What a waste!

But what does Babs write on me? Long notes, not really sentences, just pieces of sentences. And often she does not use only ink, but red and yellow pens to mark special words. How I hate these colours but she must consider these underlined words important. Very important are the words underlined in red, these are arguments. I only know that because she writes that word with an exclamation mark near the notes. Later, Babs only reads these arguments and types them into her Notebook. All the other words are not often used. Sometimes she also uses the
